

James R Windon is an Australian attorney with extensive public speaking experience. From 2002 to 2006, he worked for Elevate Education, the largest study skills company in Asia-Pacific, where he spoke to over 30,000 students on subjects such as exam technique, time-management and goal-setting. In that period, he also worked as a news presenter for Macquarie Bank Digital Television.

James now focuses his attention on the law. After graduating with degrees in Arts and Law (Honors First Class) from the University of Sydney, he worked from 2006 to 2008 at the Sydney office of Allens Arthur Robinson and for the Homeless Person Legal Service. He has recently completed an LL.M. in International Legal Studies and a Certificate in World Trade Organization Studies at Georgetown University Law Center, where he graduated with distinction and received the Thomas Bradbury Chetwood, S.J. Prize for best academic records. In June 2009, he will commence a three-month internship with the World Trade Organization Appellate Body Secretariat in Geneva. He is author of the article “Fee Shifting in Libel Litigation”, which will appear in the forthcoming edition of International Journal of Media and Entertainment Law.
