The 2016 Samuel Dash Conference on Human Rights, co-sponsored by Georgetown Law’s Human Rights Institute and Juvenile Justice Clinic, will consider the protection of children’s fundamental rights through legal and policy advocacy efforts – particularly those efforts that seek to leverage international standards and utilize domestic mechanisms despite continued challenges to the universal ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child. The event will feature experts from across a range of practice areas who have been leading efforts to advocate for children in the courts and in the public sphere, where recent successes have highlighted the importance of creative strategies and sustained efforts. The day will also feature the release of a new HRI report on access to education for undocumented migrant children in the United States – a project developed in partnership with the Women’s Refugee Commission.

The Samuel Dash Conference on Human Rights was established by Professor Dash's family and friends, Georgetown Law alumni, and the law firm of Cozen O'Connor following his passing in 2004 to honor his contributions to international and domestic human rights.
