Want to learn the skills you need to be an effective human rights researcher and practitioner?

Interested in participating in the design and development of a policy-relevant human-rights report during law school?

Join us for an open house to learn more about:

The 2016-2017 Human Rights Institute Fact-Finding Project and Practicum

Wednesday, March 23, 2016

5:30 – 6:30 p.m.

Williams Library Room 358

(3rd Floor in the Institutes Suite)

Coffee and Snacks

Each year, the Human Rights Institute facilitates a year-long fact-finding project during which students manage all aspects of the investigation, including developing the final research topic in close consultation with top human rights experts, carrying out a fact-finding mission during Week One, and drafting a major research report with legal and policy findings and recommendations. Join us to learn more about the 2016-2017 project and how to apply. Applications will be due on April 11. For more information about past reports and the application process, visit the HRI website.

For additional information contact HRI fellow Patrick Griffith (pwg7@law.georgetown.edu).