

Newsmakers

A profile of Kim Askew (L'83) appears in the March issue of Ebony magazine.

On June 25, New York Magazine profiled Sean Basinski (L'01), who opened a Mexican food cart in New York City before he went to law school and now represents street vendors on legal issues including licenses, street access and fines.

"John Delaney and the Speed of Success," a profile of John K. Delaney (L'88), appeared in the Washington Post on May 14. Delaney is the founder and chief executive officer of the Chevy Chase, Md.-based CapitaSource, which provides financing to small and mid-sized businesses.

Jay Feaster (L'87), who serves as the general manager of the National Hockey League's Tampa Bay Lightning, was ranked as the best general manager in the NHL and the second overall in professional sports by Forbes magazine.

Cecilia Gonzalez (L'79) was named one of the 50 most influential women lawyers in America by the National Law Journal. She serves as co-chair of the intellectual property practice group at Howrey, representing major corporations and high-tech clients in intellectual property litigation before the International Trade Commission and in the U.S. district courts. Gonzalez is also co-chair of the firm's business affairs committee and is managing partner of practice development.

Andrew Hurwitz (L'88) was named to Daily Variety's "Hollywood Law Impact List" in March. Hurwitz is a New York-based film financier.

Profiles of Scott Mulhauser (L'05) have recently appeared in The Hill and the National Journal. Mulhauser is the new senior adviser and counsel to Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.

"Women Lawyers Force Big Rights Gains in Uganda," a June 14 article in the Christian Science Monitor, featured Regina Mutyaba (LL.M.'94) who helped garner two court victories for women's equality in Uganda.

The National Law Journal featured Ed O'Brien (L'73) in a May 7 article about Street Law Inc., a Washington, D.C.-based organization providing practical education about law, democracy and human rights. O'Brien created Street Law Inc. after participating in the Law Center's Street Law program as a student.

Profiles of Kathryn Ruemmler (L'96) recently appeared in Washingtonian magazine and the National Journal. Ruemmler, now a partner at Latham & Watkins, previously served as the deputy director of the Department of Justice's Enron Task Force, charged with investigating criminal violations in connection with the collapse of Enron Corporation.

An article on Andrew Small (LL.M.'04) titled "A Priest's Bully Trade Pulpit" appeared in the March 26 issue of Congressional Quarterly. Small, who serves as foreign policy adviser to the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops and is a regular Capitol Hill lobbyist, talked about the Roman Catholic Church's goal to reduce poverty in developing countries by brokering trade deals.

For more media coverage of graduates, see the "Alumni in the News" page on the Georgetown Law Web site at www.law.georgetown.edu/news/ain ceremony for Florida's first "green" elementary school and a new facility for the Pine Jog Environmental Education Center. The 960-student facility will be among only a dozen public schools in the nation to receive a LEED rating. (LEED is the set of standards developed by the U.S. Green Architecture Council to classify commercial and institutional buildings as "green.")

An article by Gil Ehrenkranz titled "Israel: The Necessity of Developing a Second-Strike Capability" was published in the January/February issue of Midstream magazine.

1985

Daniel Bradlow (LL.M.) has recently been appointed to a five-year term on the first three-member roster of experts for the independent review mechanism at the African Development Bank. The experts will establish review panels to investigate the bank's compliance with its own policies and procedures. Bradlow is a law professor and director of the international legal studies program at American University's Washington College of Law.

Martin A. Stern was named to the board of directors of National Appleseed, a nonprofit pro bono network addressing injustices in public education, health care, child welfare, justice and immigration. Stern helped to reestablish an Appleseed center in Louisiana to help meet the legal needs of persons affected by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. A partner with Adams and Reese in New Orleans, he leads the appellate practice team in the litigation practice group.

1986

Keith Grinstein received a Director of the Year Award from the National Association of Corporate Directors and was recognized as a Director of the Year in Washington CEO. Grinstein is a founding partner of Second Avenue Partners, a venture capital firm in Seattle. He is also a chairman of Coinstar Inc.

Steven D. Irwin was selected as a 2007 "Super Lawyer" for Pennsylvania. Irwin chairs the employment and government relations practice groups at Leech Tishman Fuscaldo & Lampl in Pittsburgh.

Tyree P. Jones Jr. was recently named director of diversity for Reed Smith. Jones works in the firm's Washington, D.C., office, serving as of counsel in the labor and employment group. He has been working with diversity issues within the legal profession for more than 20 years in his employment practice, through his involvement with the Bar Association of San Francisco's "Goals and Timetables for Minority Hiring and Advancement" project, and through active participation in the diversity efforts of Georgetown University's Board of Governors.