

Jane Ohgami is a PhD. student in Sociology at Stanford who also has a J.D. from Harvard Law School. Jane's dissertation uses cluster analysis techniques originally designed to study protein and DNA sequences to analyze the career trajectories of lawyers, with a focus on gender, socioeconomic status, and race. Jane's work seeks to add to the scholarship on minorities' experiences in the law and how social capital such as formal and informal mentoring networks may influence career paths. In addition to working on her own research, Jane is playing a major role in helping to organize and analyze the data from the Center's survey of Law Center graduates.
