

Testimonials from Summer Scholars in Residence 2025

Stephanie Barclay

Professor of Law

"I am deeply grateful for the exceptional support provided by Georgetown University's Center for Transnational Legal Studies (CTLS) Summer Scholar Program, which enabled me to spend a transformative summer based in the United Kingdom. This opportunity allowed me to present my research at multiple conferences in Europe, engage with crucial scholarly interlocutors whose insights have significantly enriched my work, and make substantial progress on my book manuscript by drafting two new chapters along with an additional draft chapter. The CTLS program demonstrates a remarkable commitment to fostering scholarly excellence by providing their summer scholars with comprehensive resources and support systems that truly enable academic flourishing during the UK residency. The program's thoughtful structure and dedicated assistance created an ideal environment for both advancing my research and building meaningful connections within the international academic community."

Maria Glover

Carmack Waterhouse Professor of Law

"I had a very positive experience with CTLS. The location is great, and the office is set up nicely to make work pretty easy. Being near Inns of Court turned out to be a real bonus, as did the proximity to LSE. The biggest downside for me is that my time there wasn't long enough. I am doing a ton of work that intersects directly with scholarly and civil justice developments in the UK, and it felt like I had just gotten my groove when I had to leave. I hope to be there for a larger chunk this summer."

Mitt Regan

McDevitt Professor of Jurisprudence; Co-Director, Center on National Security and the Law; Director, Center on the Legal Profession

“The workshop went extremely well, and was a great opportunity for members of our Georgetown project with Oxford and Essex to share ideas with another UK project related to similar issues of civilian harm and protection. Being in London also enabled me to connect with other valuable contacts on both that project and another one on the ethics of AI in the defense sector.”
