

GLJ's Fourth Annual Online Student Notes Contest

AFROFUTURISM AND THE LAW

The Georgetown Law Journal seeks student papers that address racial inequities and imagine better futures through an Afrofuturist lens. Afrofuturism is a subgenre of visionary fiction with a focus on the Black experience, futurism, and technology. Visionary fiction imagines a future world that illuminates and challenges existing power structures and policies.

Applicant Qualifications:

The competition is open to all law students currently enrolled at any ABA-accredited law school.

Prize:

Up to two pieces will be selected as contest winners. Winning pieces will be published on GLJOnline in Spring 2024. The winning authors will receive a $250 monetary award.

Information:

For more information, all submission details, and disability accommodations, visit <https://bit.ly/112-notes-contest> or email geoljonline@gmail.com

Submit:

Submissions should be made by emailing geoljonline@gmail.com with subject line "GLJOnline Notes Contest Submission." Submissions will be anonymized before selection process begins.

Deadline: January 25, 2024 at 11:59 EST