

ANGELA J. CAMPBELL

Teaching Experience:

Professor of Law (1995-present), Associate Professor of Law (1988-1995), Georgetown University Law Center

Clinical Teaching:

The Institute for Public Representation is a law school clinic and public interest law firm at Georgetown University Law Center. The Institute serves as counsel for groups and individuals who are unable to obtain effective legal representation on matters that have a significant impact on issues of broad public importance. I am one of three faculty Directors of the Institute. I direct the Institute's First Amendment and Media Project (formerly known as the Citizens Communications Center Project).

The goal of the First Amendment and Media Project is to make the communications media accessible, diverse and responsive to the needs of all segments of the community. Most of our work involves representing advocacy, consumer and civil rights organizations before the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), the Federal Trade Commission, and federal courts. Some of the issues that we have worked on over the past several years include media ownership regulations, children's television, food marketing to children, access to communications services for persons with disabilities, equal employment opportunities at broadcast stations, and public interest requirements for digital television.

I supervise the graduate fellows and law students. Clinic students have opportunities to conduct legal and factual research, engage in sophisticated analysis, do extensive legal writing, interact with clients and other counsel, and be involved in case planning and developing strategy. I also teach classes for the clinical students on such topics as how lawyers use the media, statutory interpretation, administrative rulemaking, letter writing and lawyer-client relationships.

Classroom Teaching:

Comparative Media Law, Georgetown University Law Center (Spring 2000, Spring 2002)

This seminar explored how different countries have chosen to structure and regulate their domestic broadcast media and how they have responded to the increasing globalization of media. Students wrote papers designed to meet their upperclass writing requirement.

Programme in Comparative Media Law and Policy at Oxford University (Summers 1998, 1999 and 2001)

I taught in this summer program, which was offered for the first time in the summer of 1998. That year, I taught a series of classes comparing the differing approaches of the United States and the United Kingdom to broadcast regulation. In 1999 and 2001, I taught classes on the US perspectives on broadcast regulation, public broadcasting, content regulation, ownership regulation, digital television and privacy on the internet.

Competition and Telecommunications, Georgetown University Law Center (Spring 1991)

I taught this course with Adjunct Professor Jeffrey Blumenfeld. The course examined legal and regulatory responses to the development of competition in telecommunications equipment and services.

Professional Experience:

Trial Attorney, Communications and Finance Section, Antitrust Division, United States Department of Justice (1984-1988)

Investigated requests for enforcement of the Modified Final Judgment in United States v. AT&T. Reviewed proposed mergers involving communications firms. Drafted comments filed in FCC rulemaking proceedings. Received Special Achievement awards in 1986 and 1987.

Associate, Fisher, Wayland, Cooper & Leader (1983-1984)

Briefed and argued appeals of FCC decisions to the D.C. Circuit. Drafted applications, petitions, oppositions, comments and other filings in FCC proceedings. Advised clients in the areas of broadcasting, cable television, satellites and common carrier telecommunications.

Graduate Fellow, Institute for Public Representation, GULC (1981-1983)

Worked on a variety of projects involving communications law and policy, including comments in rulemakings at the FCC in support of diversifying the ownership of mass media facilities, appeals of FCC decisions concerning deregulation of radio, children's television, and broadcast ownership rules, and legislative work regarding amendments to the Communications Act.
