Frequently Asked Questions

GENERAL ORIENTATION QUESTIONS

Is attendance mandatory at all Orientation sessions? Can a student skip part of Orientation? Students are expected to attend all mandatory academic-related Orientation sessions:

- Welcome
- Beyond the Briefs: Respectful Dialogue as a Core Competency in Legal Practice
- Myths and Realities
- Introduction to the First Year Experience

Students who need to make a request to miss any of the above sessions should email lawdeanofstudents@georgetown.edu.

Attendance at all other community events is not mandatory (including the concurrent breakout sessions, the Faculty Moot Court, and Peer Advisor meals), but you're strongly encouraged to take advantage of all the great things going on and to connect with your new Georgetown Law community.

When/where should I check in?

Students should plan to check in on the second floor of McDonough at some point prior to their respective section welcome. The welcome sessions are:

- Section 1 – 10:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.

Can a student go to another section's Orientation session?

Students are expected to attend the mandatory academic Orientation sessions that are specifically scheduled for their section. Should a conflict arise and a student is unable to attend one of their section's programs, a request must be made to lawdeanofstudents@georgetown.edu.

What sessions may family members/significant others attend?

Due to space limitations, ALL sessions are for incoming first-year JD students only.

There is no dress code for Orientation and students should dress comfortably as the weather will likely be quite warm.

Does a student have to register to attend the Faculty Moot Court program? Is it mandatory?

Registration is not required. Attendance is not mandatory but highly recommended – a highlight of Orientation Week! The program begins after the Peer Advisor dinner and will be taking place at Gaston Hall on the Georgetown Main Campus.

What is the Faculty Moot Court case?

The program features a mock argument of a case that will be heard by the Supreme Court this coming term. This year's case will be United States v. Rahimi.

CLASS READINGS & WEBSITES (from JD Academic Services)

Where can I find my first class assignments?

Professors typically assign readings to be completed in advance of the first day of class. Faculty Support will begin posting the first class assignments on the First Class Assignments Canvas page on August 14. Some faculty also list their first assignment on their individual Canvas pages. Professors may also email assignments in advance of the first class, so be sure to check your @georgetown email address.

If you have any questions about the assignment, contact your professor directly.

LOCKERS

How can I register for a locker?

Students will be able to request a locker during Orientation by the Chapel on the first floor of McDonough.

PARKING

Can I park on campus?

As you're planning your travel to and from campus during Orientation week, we encourage the use of public transportation within the D.C., Virginia and Maryland area. The Law Center is located near the Union Station and Judiciary Square metro stops. You can also utilize the Circulator bus or a variety of D.C. bus routes in the area.

Parking will not be available for students on-campus during Orientation week, but you are welcome to park in one of the local parking garages for a fee.

Please note that there is ongoing concrete work in the McDonough Hall parking garage. Spaces will be unavailable on a rotating basis until the project is completed. Because there will be fewer spaces available we expect there to be congestion. A parking attendant will be monitoring parking daily to ensure compliance. Please do not enter the garage if you see the "student parking full" sign displayed at the garage entrance.

PRINTING, PHOTOCOPYING, & SCANNING

Where can a student go to make copies, scan a document, etc.?

Our secured wireless networks support devices that comply with the 802.11n Wi-Fi and WPA2
