INTRODUCTION

Our study abroad programs are designed to offer students a variety of opportunities in which they will immerse themselves in a foreign culture, studying transnational, international, and/or foreign law. This allows students to develop international and transnational legal perspectives, and to prepare themselves for careers that will take them beyond the borders of the United States.

While the administrative structure varies from program to program, students who study abroad should be aware that they do so within the context of the host institution's educational culture and infrastructure. In particular, the level of administrative support on offer to local law students in an overseas jurisdiction may be different from what would be typical at the Law Center or another US school. To some degree this difference can be confusing or even frustrating, but it has to be anticipated as an integral part of the Study Abroad experience.

SELECTION CRITERIA

Selection will be based on the following:

- There is a presumptive requirement, unless otherwise stated, that all applicants hold a GPA of 3.0 or higher
- Preference will be given to students entering their third year
- Demonstrated interest in international and transnational issues (i.e. previous coursework, work experience, internships, volunteer activities)
- Demonstrated potential for success in a semester abroad program
- Defined educational objectives
- Proficiency in language of instruction (when applicable)

APPLICATION PROCESS

Interested students must submit an application to the Office of Transnational Programs (OTP). All applications must be completed via OTP's online application system. To begin, students must first select a program, and then create an account. Once you have created an account you can complete the required application materials.

Students may apply to more than one program, but a separate application must be submitted for each program, applications must be ranked in order of preference. For application purposes, fall and spring enrollment at the same host school are treated as separate programs.

The application process can be competitive and we often receive more applications than we have slots available. If we are not able to approve a student for their first choice, we look at the student's alternate choices in order of preference. Students will only be offered a place in one program, regardless of the number of applications submitted.

Alternates may be chosen from the applicants who were not admitted to any program. It is possible to be selected as an alternate to more than one program. Alternates will be asked to complete the follow-up application materials that approved students complete according to the same timeline. If an approved student withdraws from the program, their seat will be offered to the first alternate. If the first alternate declines the offer, the seat is offered to the second alternate and so on.

Most programs have an additional application process that must be completed for the host school after a student is approved by OTP. Detailed information about this process will be provided to approved students via their online account as appropriate. Students are not guaranteed acceptance until the host institution approves their application. Students should not apply to the individual host schools unless they have received approval to do so from OTP.

Students interested in studying abroad for the summer or a semester on an ad-hoc basis apply for approval through OTP's online application system. Limitations and additional requirements apply. Review the non-Georgetown ad-hoc study abroad webpage, ad-hoc summer abroad webpage, and ad-hoc semester abroad webpage for more information.

Students who are approved for a Georgetown-sponsored program and accept the offer are prohibited from applying to study abroad on an ad-hoc basis at another school or through another ABA approved law school's program.

FALL AND SPRING ENROLLMENT

Georgetown's overseas partner schools have historically offered study abroad programs geared toward enrolling U.S. students during the fall semester. As an accommodation, some of these schools have agreed to enroll our students – under limited circumstances -- during the spring semester as well.

- Students interested in spring enrollment at National University of Singapore may apply through the regular application process.
- Students interested in spring enrollment at other Georgetown partner law schools must contact Cara Morris, Executive Director of Transnational Programs (cara.morris@georgetown.edu) at least two weeks prior to the Semester Abroad application deadline to discuss their plans and any special limitations specific to their preferred programs.
- All students considering spring enrollment should review the "Special Considerations Regarding Spring and Final Semester Enrollment" section below.

Special Considerations Regarding Spring and Final Semester Enrollment

Students should be aware that spring semester study abroad at any Georgetown partner school may involve significant administrative issues that do not apply to fall semester study abroad. In addition, students who wish to study abroad during their final semester (fall or spring) should take particular notice of item #2 below. Please contact OTP with questions.

1. Academic Calendar. In contrast to their fall semester academic calendars, often developed with well-established study abroad programs in mind, spring semester calendars at overseas host schools may not conform to Georgetown's own academic calendar. Students are responsible for referring to the host school's website and reviewing the applicable academic calendar carefully before applying for spring term study abroad.
2. Special Considerations for Graduating Students. Students who apply to study abroad in their last semester at Georgetown Law must assume the risk that scheduling conflicts due to nonconforming academic calendars and/or administrative delays at the host school may prevent them from graduating on time, and/or being able to meet bar registration deadlines.

3. Course Offerings and Credit. The range of courses offered to Georgetown students by host schools during the spring semester will quite often differ from those offered in the fall. It is often impossible to confirm which specific courses will be offered in the spring until just before the start of that term. Students should be aware that, until specific spring semester course offerings are known, the Office of Transnational Programs is unable to confirm how many credits may be transferred back from any participating spring semester study abroad program.
4. Housing. The availability of housing for Georgetown students studying at overseas locations may be different in the spring and fall terms. Students applying to study abroad during the spring semester should be prepared to secure housing on their own.

ADVISING AND COURSE SELECTION

Each program's schedule of classes showing the actual course offerings, as well as the day and times that courses meet are often not available until right before the Fall semester begins. Therefore, students are not always able to know exactly which courses will be available to them in advance.

Students should contact OTP for general advice regarding courses. In the event that a student wishes to take a course not listed as approved on the Georgetown website, or otherwise specifically approved by Georgetown, the student should email the course title and course syllabus or description to Cara Morris at cara.morris@georgetown.edu. Students are required to provide the name of each course taken with the number of credits assigned by the host institution and the number of hours the course meets to the Office of Transnational Programs in advance of the deadline to finalize their schedule.

In addition, students may be asked to verify the number of hours each previously approved course meets in order to confirm the number of credits that the student will receive for that course. In some cases, the foreign institution may increase or decrease the course meeting time from year to year without providing an update to Georgetown directly.

Georgetown will not give credit for classes taken virtually via a host institution abroad. Students should select courses from in-person offerings only.

In addition, each host school will also have an on-site advisor for international students.

Students who are accepted and participate in these programs will be required, upon their return, to submit a report of five pages or more that includes, among other items: a discussion of whether the student's goals for participating were achieved; a description and evaluation of each course taken; a description and evaluation of other important academic, cultural, and social experiences; experiences in obtaining housing; and a discussion of any other matters that the student thinks important. OTP will review the report. The Office of Transnational Programs posts reports online for other interested students to read.

The most recent student reports are available on their respective program pages. These reports are intended to be useful and informative tools. They are not official documents and do not necessarily convey the current official policies and procedures of Georgetown Law or host institutions.

IMPORTANT RULES and GUIDELINES

Students who are considering applying for any of the programs mentioned above should remember that they must successfully complete the following academic requirements in order to receive their JD degree:

- 85 credits, including:
 - The required first-year program
 - The upperclass legal writing requirement
 - A course in Professional Responsibility
 - A minimum of 6 credits must be earned in experiential courses
 - A course that teaches students to think critically about the law's claim to neutrality and the law's differential effects on subordinated groups, including those identified by race, gender, indigeneity, and class
 - A minimum of 54 credits must be earned at the Law Center
- The minimum program length
- A minimum cumulative grade point average of at least a C (2.00/4.33) in Law Center courses

For questions regarding academic requirements, check the Georgetown Law Student Handbook or consult with the Office of Academic Affairs.

Eligibility

Semester abroad programs are open to Georgetown JD students who have completed the first-year JD curriculum. Preference will be given to JD students completing their final year of courses.

Part-time JD Students

Part-time students who have completed the full first-year curriculum (including Criminal Justice and Property) are eligible for Georgetown-approved semester abroad programs. It is expected that part-time students will take a minimum of 12 credits while abroad. They will continue their part-time status at Georgetown and will be charged on a per credit basis.

Transfer Students

Transfer JD students must complete 54 credits at the Law Center. Because semester abroad credits are not earned at the Law Center,* in order to study abroad, transfer students must complete the 54 Law Center credits in three full-time semesters and one summer session (or five part-time semesters and one summer session.) The summer session may be taken at the Law Center. This involves taking a substantial credit load each full-time semester that the student is at the Law Center. Transfer students considering pursuing this avenue should talk to an academic advisor in the Office of Academic Affairs.

LL.M. Students

All currently enrolled LL.M.s, regardless of division or country of first law degree, may apply to enroll in CTLS for a semester prior to their graduation from Georgetown. Applications will be evaluated on a routine basis and, in all cases, after giving priority to JD candidates. If admitted, the current full time Georgetown tuition rate applies.

CTLS credits may only be applied towards Georgetown LLM degree on an exceptional basis, with prior approval required with respect to individual courses and number of credits.

US trained LLM students may also apply to other (non-CTLS) Georgetown semester abroad programs. (Foreign trained LLMs are not eligible for these programs.) Applications will be evaluated on a routine basis and, in all cases, after giving priority to JD candidates. If admitted, the current full time Georgetown tuition rate applies.

Credits may be applied towards the current Georgetown degree on an exceptional basis, with prior approval required with respect to individual courses; and number of credits.

Grading, Transfer of Credit, Pass/Fail

Students participating in overseas programs arranged by Georgetown Law will receive credit for each Georgetown approved course for which they receive a passing grade. A passing grade is defined as a grade that would be considered passing at the foreign institution. Courses must be approved by OTP in order for students to receive credit.

In order to receive Georgetown Law credit for courses taken abroad, students may not take classes at the foreign institution on a pass/fail basis if another grading option is available.

Individual courses taken and the grades received at the foreign school will not appear on the Georgetown transcript and the grades will not be factored into the Georgetown GPA. The Georgetown transcript will reflect the number of credits earned and the name of the host institution. Students can obtain transcripts with courses and grades from the host institution.

Acceptance of any credit or grade for any course taken is subject to determination by Georgetown Law. Credits earned at a foreign institution are calculated with reference to ABA Standard 310's definition of "credit hour" as not less than 12.5 hours of direct faculty instruction and 30 hours of out-of-class student work, or at least an equivalent amount of work for other academic activities. Participation in an overseas program will not affect a student's ability to take courses offered at the Law Center on a pass/fail basis.

In order to receive credit for time abroad, students are required to submit all course syllabi and papers, as well as write a report of five or more pages. (For a description of the report requirement see Advising and Course Selection.)

With the exception of the program at Sciences Po in Paris (see below), students can earn no more than a total of 14 credits from study abroad with a Georgetown-sponsored program. Students may do a non-Georgetown summer study abroad program and a Georgetown-sponsored study abroad program, but may only earn a total of 14 credits. For example, if a student has already taken four credits at a non-Georgetown summer study abroad program, the student could only transfer in 10 credits from a Georgetown-sponsored semester abroad program

Students who are selected to participate in the Master's of Economic Law program at Sciences Po in Paris may earn a maximum of 28 credits for their two semesters of study. Participants are expected to complete their JD degree during the same semester that they complete the program at Sciences Po.

The ABA limits study abroad credit to one third of the credits required to graduate with a JD degree. At Georgetown Law, this limit is 28 credits. As the Sciences Po program is the only program that allows students to exceed the institutional maximum of 14 credits and reach the ABA maximum of 28 credits, students contemplating participation in this program should take note of this limit. In practical terms, it means that credits earned in any summer study abroad program will reduce the number of credits that a student can earn from Sciences Po. For instance, if a student participates in a summer program abroad and earns 4 credits toward his/her JD, that student may count no more than 24 credits earned at Sciences Po toward his/her JD degree.

HOUSING

Students should review the Housing section of each individual program. Students are responsible for obtaining their own housing and for all housing-related expenses.

ACCOMMODATION FOR DISABILITY

Students should be aware that when studying abroad, the host institution's rules, policies, and procedures will apply. As a result, the level of accessibility, disability services, and accommodations to which you are accustomed at Georgetown Law may be different, or unavailable, at the host school. Students are encouraged to contact Disability Services at Georgetown Law to discuss accommodation requests early in the process to best ensure successful planning. The office can be reached at disabilityservices@law.georgetown.edu, or 202-662-4042.

ONLINE PROGRAM REVIEWS

Student Reviews from Student reviews from the past three years are available at the end of their respective program pages. Additional reports will be made available as they are received. These reports are intended to be useful and informative resources. They are not official documents and do not necessarily convey the current official policies and procedures of Georgetown Law or host institutions.

REQUIRED PREDEPARTURE INFORMATION SESSION

All students approved to study abroad will be required to attend a pre-departure information session, date and time to be determined.

TUITION AND FINANCIAL AID

Tuition

Full-time students participating in Georgetown's semester abroad program will pay full-time Georgetown Law Center tuition for the semester that they visit abroad.

Part-time students participating in these programs will pay Law Center tuition and will be charged by the credit hour.

All students enrolled in the full-year Master's in Economic Law Program in Paris will be charged full-time Law Center tuition for both the fall and spring semester that they are studying in Paris.

Financial Aid Application and Program Budgets

Students enrolled in Georgetown study abroad programs who wish to apply for financial aid should follow the regular financial aid application deadlines and requirements. With the exception of Federal Work-Study (FWS), participants are eligible to apply for financial aid through all the programs offered to students enrolled at the Law Center. (Federal regulations do not allow use of FWS funds abroad.)

Each study abroad program has its own student living and travel expense budget. In most instances, the abroad program budgets are lower than the DC-based budget. Study abroad budgets reflect estimated costs provided by each partner school as well as estimated travel expenses determined through our own internet research. Budgets provided by local institutions are based on housing and living standards applicable to typical graduate students in that location. Students should keep in mind that these standards may be more modest than what they are used to. An estimated budget for the prior year is posted on each program's website. Estimated budgets for the coming academic year are posted later in the spring semester. Study abroad budget adjustment request policies and procedures differ from those that apply to Georgetown Law's DC program. Study abroad students should reach out to the Office of Student Financial Aid at lawfinaid@georgetown.edu for guidance regarding budget adjustments.

Financial Aid Disbursement

As is the case with our DC-based program, federal loans may not be disbursed more than 10 calendar days prior to your study abroad program's first day of class, rather than the first day of orientation or other pre-class activities. Funds are disbursed manually to your student account and will be posted to MyAccess. Students should plan their finances accordingly and should contact the Office of Student Financial Aid to discuss any concerns they have regarding the timing of their financial aid disbursement.

If a student enrolls in a short course at the Law Center that concludes before his or her study-abroad program begins, the start date of Law Center classes may apply for aid purposes. Students interested in short courses should register for the short course through the normal registration process, but should also notify Cara Morris (cara.morris@georgetown.edu) and the Office of Financial Aid lawfinaid@georgetown.edu.

WITHDRAWING AFTER ADMISSION

A $350 fee will be assessed to students who withdraw after July 1, 2024. Exceptions can be made for extenuating circumstances. Students who withdraw for a medical condition or other emergency will be excused from paying this fee if they can provide adequate documentation of the medical condition or other emergency that makes attendance impossible.

PAID AND UNPAID EMPLOYMENT WHILE OVERSEAS

It is our hope that students, when not in class or studying, will spend their time pursuing the cultural and social offerings of the host city. Students who are considering pursuing employment opportunities while studying abroad are encouraged to do so only when such opportunities will provide significant educational or professional benefits. Students are responsible for determining if their visa status will allow them to work. No host institution will be expected to sponsor a visa other than that which is required for short-term study at that institution, nor should the host school be expected to provide guidance or advice as to how a different visa status can be obtained.

IMPLICATIONS FOR SUMMER OR POST-GRADUATE JOB SEARCH

Spending a semester abroad can be beneficial to your overall career goals. However, it may also have implications for the timing of your job search. For example, the application and interview process for many judicial clerkships, government honor programs, and public interest fellowships occur during the fall of the final year of law school. Students who wish to re-interview with large law firms during their last year should also be aware that interviews typically occur during the fall.

If you have questions or concerns about this, please make an appointment with the Office of Career Strategies, or Office of Public Interest and Community Service. We also encourage you to meet with an OCS or OPICS advisor to discuss how going abroad fits within your overall career plans.

VISAS

Each student is responsible for applying for and obtaining his or her own visa. Upon admission to a program, students should review the Entry/Exit Requirements of the Country Specific Information on the U.S. State Department's travel website. Students should pay particular attention to the estimated processing time for visas and plan accordingly.

ATTENTION INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS: Study abroad may have an impact on the U.S. status of students who do not hold a U.S. passport. Before proceeding with an application, please consult with the Law Center visa team (or 202-662-9036.)

EDUCATION ABROAD ACCIDENT AND SICKNESS INSURANCE AND TEAM ASSIST PLAN

All students participating in study abroad or other overseas opportunities arranged by Georgetown University are required to have overseas medical coverage and travel emergency assistance benefits. The University provides this coverage through the Georgetown University World Class Coverage Plan underwritten by ACE American Insurance Company. Students should follow the links provided below for specific information. The cost of the insurance will be billed to each student's account.

The 2024-2025 fee for the plan is TBD. In 2023-2024 the fee was $65 for any one of the following trimesters:

- May, June, July, August
- September, October, November, December
- January, February, March, April

Information regarding next year's plan and fees will be posted as soon as it becomes available. Coverage and the cost is expected to be similar to that of last year's plan. The following links pertain to the 2023-2024 plan for reference.

General Plan Information

Frequently Asked Questions

The plan also includes emergency medical assistance benefits through its Team Assist Plan (TAP.)
Services available through TAP include:

Provider Referral
Emergency Medical Evacuation
Travel and Technical Assistance

For a complete list of services provided by TAP see Claims and Team Assist Plan Information linked above.

International SOS Travel Assistance

As mentioned above, Students enrolled in the study abroad insurance plan must rely on TAP for medical evacuation and other medical emergency services. Other travel services are provided by International SOS at no additional cost. Before students depart they should register on the ISOS website and read all the information provided there.

Services include:

Security Evacuation Services
Online tracking of personal travel itineraries
Online travel health reports
Automated security email alerts
Referrals to clinics practicing western medicine

Contact information for ISOS can be downloaded from the website.

CANCELLATION

Programs are subject to cancellation in case of unforeseen international events that could substantially inhibit operations at the host institution or that could seriously compromise student safety.
